

The Finance Leader Report: What could you do with an extra day?

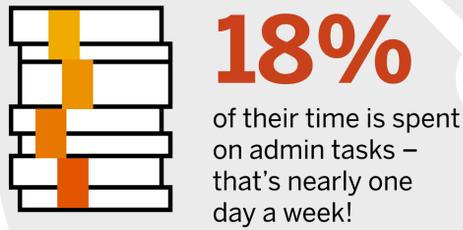

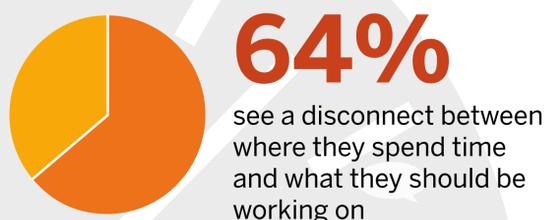

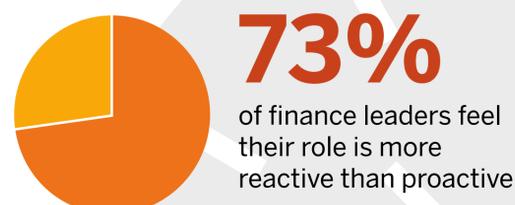

If time is money, it needs to be spent wisely.

CEOs are looking to finance to take on a more strategic role. You should have a prime seat at the boardroom table, but resource can hold you back. So, how can you work differently to make time for strategic thinking?

We asked 500 UK finance leaders to share their views in an independent survey. Here's what they told us.

Spending time

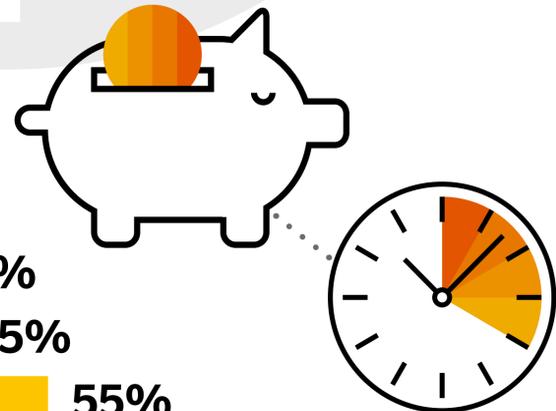

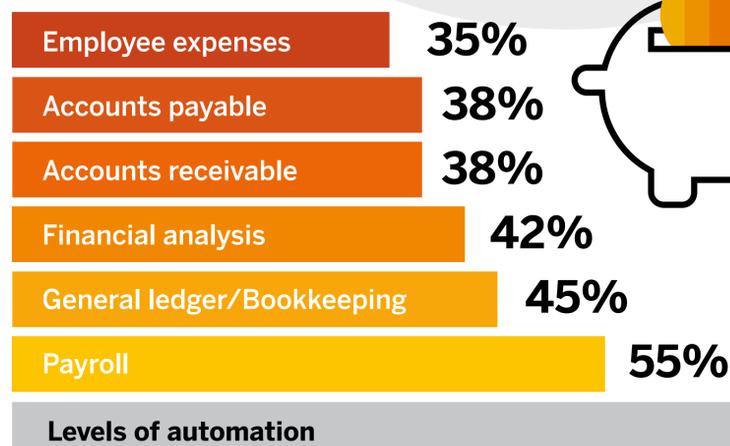

So what's taking up their time?

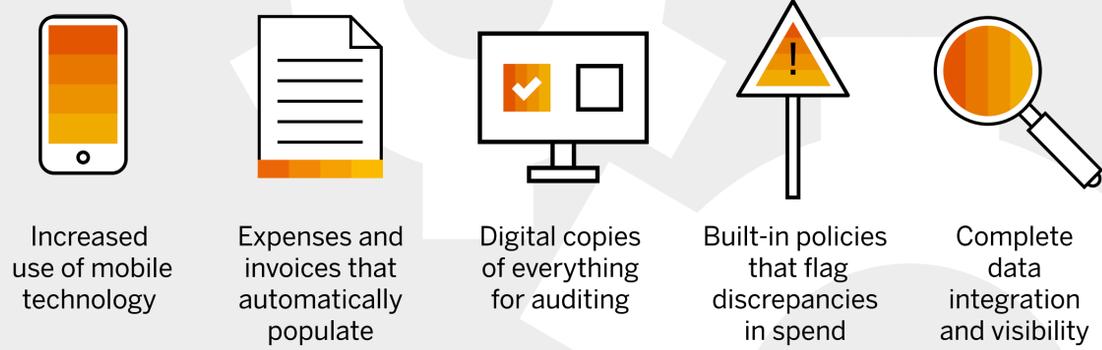

- 1 General admin tasks
- 2 Managing cash flow
- 3 Balancing books and budgeting
- 4 Helping increase revenue
- 5 Forecasting

Saving time

Expenses and supplier invoice (AP) processes are the least automated overall.

Where can time be saved?

Finance leaders predict they could save 26% of their team's time by fully automating their processes.

The future

More productive

Speed through essential processes without Compromising on accuracy.

More valued

Prove you have more to offer than handling admin – let your voice be heard.

More strategic

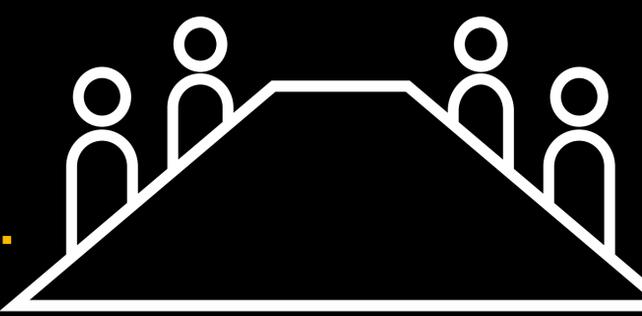

Provide the insights and forecasts the business relies on that only you can access.

Automate processes, save time, think and act strategically...

...and take your seat at the boardroom table.

Download the full report to discover more insight from finance leaders and how you could make time for strategic thinking.

*Source: 2016 study of 500 UK Finance Leaders across a range of business sizes and industries by independent research specialist Vanson Bourne.